Course Information
Course Title	Marxist Political Economy in the West
Teaching Language	English
Teaching Methods	Exposition and class participation.
Type of Class Arrangement (A-H)	A2
Course Description	This course examines selected aspects of Marxist political economy as it has been understood and interpreted in the West since the time of Karl Marx. Throughout the course, the history and practices of Marxism are reviewed in detail, highlighting the strengths, achievements, weaknesses and political reach of Western Marxism. The course focuses on two aspects of Marxism in detail: economics and politics. On the economics side, the course stresses Marx' s theory of value. On the politics side, it focuses on the notions of class, mode of production and the state. Throughout the course, basic theory is combined with applications and historical experiences, and extensive readings of the key contributions to the literature. The main objectives of this course are to: Introduce students to Marxist political economy in the West. Compare the Marxist approach with alternative theoretical perspectives on capitalism in the West, its drivers, and its contradictions.
